NOVELTIES FOR YACHTING

A Lot of Suggestions About Millinery The Summer Blower and the Dress. The Dreuny Girt.

I feel a little diffident about freeks this week, the air is so full of blante-es, but it will take to some time to fit to all out with "Syrian trouvers," and peanwhile here are some more or less interesting gowns that were arranged to figure at one of the quieter meep less planned for the much-talked of lpanish infants.

Spanish infants.

Pale mauve dushesse satin was chosen by one of the blondest of New York's nociety dames, with folds of green velves brought fichu fashion over the boson. A cape of Irish point lace was drawn about the shoulders, and about the skirt was a point lace donnee with green velves rometes looping it high. Violets and illies of the valley were the matron's flowers, and you couldn't inagine a more sevenely dignified bodice and train if you shut your eyes and ant down in the dark and tried.

For a young girl who was wonder-

For a young girl who was wonder-fully flattered by the prospect of her first encounter with royalty was a peach pink silk frock, with a gored flounce headed above the knees with a quitted ribbon. The low neck was filled in with dainty lace, and below the decolletage was a capelike lace collar. A ribbon belt at the slender collar. A ribbon beit at the slender unist was tied with respond.

These things were modern, but for mariety there was also something early Greek and pale blue. Satin was the stuff that composed it. Whether satin is early Greek is more than I can say. Folded and draped diagonally it gave the desired classic effect to a tail girl with a salid greek. with a willowy figure and a very un-classic "bun" of hair. The prettient feature of this outfit was its full open sieves of blue chiffon, with deep ince ruffs that drooped over the hands.
The next prettiest feature was the hem of paie blue silk that turned down over tion fabores for their sais. Very descriptive too it looks against sunny siries. Hough somewhat dun against brown ones. Do you know. I wonder it brown to coming in because rony checks are going out. There are not many with much color who can wear bright browns, while the color is particularly becoming to a great variety of pair skips.

I saw this morning three yachting frocks about which I feel constrained tell you. One, which its proud exhibitor called a "smock" frock, was made of a white yachting lines with gaugings on the front and the sleeves and with fancy stitching of red and blue on the upper and the lower skirts, for the costume had both you may be smre. The upper part of the smock with the collar was made of a colored linen matching the stitching. Round the waist was a linen belt stitched in the waist was a linen belt stitched in fancy colors at both ends.

A navy bine sail cloth frock came ashore this morning from a saucy craft that lay with her nose up the Hudson. It landed on the person of a plump, pretty girl who immediately went shopping to complete her outfit for cream cord and gold, and the revers on its smart coat were faced with cream cloth, of which stuff, too, its very

Goes to School Monday. A very sensible lady out on Ninth street delayed sending her small son to the public schools until he should be old enough to look after himself and has been teaching him herself in order that he might not fall too far behind other boys of his age. Yesterday morning Master Freddy came gravely up to his mother for his lesson. After the regular routine was ended his mother put a few leading questions:

"Freddy, what is a year?"

"Three hundred and sixty-five days."

"What is a day?"

"Twenty-four hours—and an hour is 60 minutes, and a minute is 60 seconds. "What is an instant?"

"An instant?" and Master Freddy knitted his downy brow a brief space while he thought. "Oh, yes, I know, I know, mamma. An instant is a hole in the ground."

"A hole in the ground!" exclaimed his mother, totally taken aback. "Why, how in the world do you make that out?" "Why," declared Master Fred with decision, as he hurriedly opened his reader, "this book says, 'John's dog fell down in an Instant?

The Elephant's Sense

Why an elephant should be afraid of a mouse is a mystery. Some have doubted the generosity of the elephant because of his aversion to small animals. but none can doubt his intelligence. Buffon, notwithstanding his idea of the mere mechanism of animals, spoke c the elephant as at the same time a "miracle of intelligence and a monster of matter." Ernest Menault happily referred to him as the animal that carried his nose in his hand. Hence the marvelous intelligence of his trunk. The senses of touch and smell co-operate.

The nerves which extend through his trunk are so numerous that they equal in number sil those distributed over the rest of the body. The elephant can keep perfect time to music. He has the ear perfectly organized, and the hearing is extremely fine. The eye of the elephant is distinguished from that of other animals by the pathetic expression of sentiment. Take him all in all, naturalists agree that he is the most intelligent of animals. And why should he be afraid of a mouse?-New York Tribune.

Improved Boats and Muscle.

The boat with which the Oxford crew won the great 'varsity race must have had a pneumatic tire. With better methods of training and improved systems of rowing the men of today har unquestionably the advantage of the of past years, but too much credit must not be giver where it is not due. The vast improvement in boats must not be overlooked in considering the time of the race.

Neither Harvard nor Yale has any thing to fear from Oxford or Cambridge provided a better boat can be made here than that in which the victorious Oxford crew rowed. It was the pneumatic tirand not Nancy Hanks that played haves with Mand S.'s record. Good horses make good tockeys, good sulkies make good horses, and good boats make good crews.—New York Tribune.
